

Bibliographic Entry: Black Women's Struggle Against Racial Discrimination

Simien, Evelyn M., and Danielle L. McGuire. "A Tribute to the Women: Rewriting History, Retelling Herstory in Civil Rights." Politics & Gender 10.3 (2014): 413-31.

This resource material focuses on a different perspective about Civil Rights Movement, who has often been centered on extraordinary figures and dramatic events, while failing to spotlight on the important link between CRM and understanding of discrimination and oppression, in the form of racism and sexism, and the forgotten women who through such experiences risked what they have, even their lives, to fight for justice and equality. Some of these forgotten heroines are members of the black community, who apart from their skin color, have been oppressed as well due to their gender.
