REQUIRED JOURNAL RETAKE ASSIGNMENT
English Composition (ENG100)

Student name: German Rivadeneira Student number: 22364865
Exam number: 250200 Date: 06/24/2017 Evaluator: RB
Exam grade: 44%

Dear German,

Unfortunately, you earned a failing grade on the first-attempt of this part of your final exam which is worth a total of 33% of your grade. According to the Academic Policies in the Penn Foster Student Handbook and to improve the likelihood you will pass this required course, you must prepare a make-up submission.

Within the next four weeks, submit a document containing the required journal entries once again using the format required for the course journal as assigned on page 16 in your study guide. Review the assignments as given in your study guide along with any related pages in your textbook. Add to, delete, and/or revise your current entries to meet each assignment. Contact the school with any questions about the requirements.

Include this set of instructions with your retake submission, or there may be a problem completing your evaluation. For electronic submissions, copy from "Required Journal" through the evaluator's initials and paste at the beginning of your retake document. For the file name of your make-up journal, use your student number, , and your name as required but add "Retake" after your last name. Then submit your retake journal for grading.

Best wishes on your retake,
Education Department
Penn Foster College

250200 - Course Journal Evaluation
Unit 1: Introduction to Composition, Entries 1-6

Your journal will be evaluated according to the following requirements:

- Ideas and Content: How accurately and effectively you have responded to the entry; your writing focuses on the topic of the entry and is based on the correct reading assignments in your texts; you effectively engage with the content of the reading assignments and compose thoughtful original responses to each entry; when required, you cite and document secondary source material appropriately and correctly.

- Organization: How well each entry is developed; all paragraphs begin with an appropriate topic sentence and are developed fully by using examples, illustration, and/or evidence; each entry meets the required minimum length.
- General Correctness: How well entries meet the expectations of college-level academic writing in the following areas:
 - Sentence structure
 - Grammar
 - Word choice and spelling
 - Punctuation
- Format: How accurately you have followed the prescribed format for the journal by including the required header, entry title and date, and used correct margins, font, and line spacing.

June 11, 2017, ENTRY 1: Me, A Writer?

Commented [BR1]: Nice formatting.

Attitude: By reading the beginning of all the steps that study guide and textbook gave me, I have concluded that it takes a lot of information in order to become a good writer. My daily living and schedule will be a good thing to prove that I am able to write after taking it as a challenge due to my native language. Juggling between my responsibilities of being a father, a provider and a teammate at work, sometimes I find my time wrapped up trying to prioritize where my time is needed most. Without any doubt, however, this process of learning how to write will lead me to the success to reach my goals. I have no doubt that with the right amount of dedication and hard work, I can make the necessary strives to make this change.

Inventory: After completing the inventory quiz in the textbook, I was able to learn more about myself and identify the type of writer I am. Based on the results from the quiz my level of interaction with others is "independent" which means that I prefer to work more alone than in a group. Regarding the approach of learning tasks, I am "creative" I lean more towards exploring and experiment before getting the manual and follow the steps, at some point this can be helpful because I tend to think out of the box but sometimes it takes me more time than just follow instructions or rules. About how I prefer to take in and process information I am "spatial" meaning that I am a visual person and I preferred to learn by watching videos, graphic, drawing and other types of visual tools. Another category within the quiz was the approach to decision-making and problem-solving which according to the results I am "Emotional" where I prefer the majority of the time to satisfy the needs of other rather than my own, and lastly the way in which I prefer to perceive information is "Abstract" in which I see the big picture not many details. Based on the results the two areas that I would like to improve will be the "emotional" and the "abstract", I understand emotions are important as they are connected to our feelings, however, to bring any point across and earn credibility within the readers I will have to be more objective in my writing, and also provide more details on the topic I will be writing about instead of seeing the big picture and leave the reader in the air.

June 11, 2017, ENTRY 2: Correctness in Writing

Errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation affect the relationship between the writer and the reader in an essay by creating confusion and misunderstanding in the paper that has been written. This is a challenge that all writers have when they want to communicate their knowledge or when they need to write a report, a book, a letter, an email and so on. It is very important to follow grammatical and spelling rules and proper punctuation to make sure that the message has been delivered clear and correctly to the reader. Writers should always check and proofread their work to avoid and minimize mistakes. This section requires further development. How do errors affect the reader's interest? How do errors affect the reader's opinion of the writer and the writer's credibility? Trying to identify my strength and weaknesses as a writer is not an easy task. I consider myself as a person who can express anything orally; however, when it comes to writing, this is something that is very difficult for me. My strength is that I'm able to see the overall in a project or a subject that the reader can identify the general idea of Commented [BR2]: What?

Commented [BR3]: Please reword this sentence for clarity.

Commented [BR4]: This word means "tries." It does not make sense here. I think you meant "strides."

Commented [BR5]: This should be "following." Use parallel structure.

Commented [BR6]: Run-on sentence.

Commented [BR7]: This should be "prefer." Do not change tenses mid-sentence.

Commented [BR8]: This word needs to be plural.

Commented [BR9]: Run-on sentence.

Commented [BR10]: Indent the beginnings of paragraphs.

Commented [BR11]: This was a learning style quiz, not a writing style quiz. Learning style and writing style are two very different things. You must change your answer to reflect this. You need to think of two specific ways you want to improve your writing that do not involve changing your learning style. You cannot change your learning style. Your learning style should be a tool to help you better retain information.

Commented [BR12]: Run-on sentence.

Commented [BR13]: This should be "clearly."

Commented [BR14]: A new paragraph needs to start here.

Commented [BR15]: Spacing error.

Commented [BR16]: "Overall" isn't a thing. This doesn't make sense.

June 11, 2017, ENTRY 3: Prewriting and Thesis Statement

Brainstorm: Social Media and Networking Website

- Facebook
- Instagram
- LinkedIn
- Snapchat
- Twitter
- Pinterest

Respond: The main differences between the social media and networking websites are as follows:

- Facebook is used for general information sharing with friends and family,
- Instagram only allows you to post brief information sharing such of videos and pictures,
- LinkedIn is an employment and business network for professionals online,
- Snapchat will be entertainment media,
- Twitter represent the online news where users interact with messages and
- Pinterest is a social network that allows users to visually share and discover a new interest.

And they are categorized as social for Facebook and Instagram, professional and news for LinkedIn and Twitter, entertainment for Snapchat and Pinterest; and, all they have in common are to connect people around the world regardless of the media people will be using.

Commented [BR19]: Never use "you" in academic writing. It creates a conversational, casual tone that is inappropriate for formal writing. When you use "you," you are directly addressing the reader; this can be jarring and distracting to your reader. I will highlight all further instances of this error in green.

Commented [BR20]: This wording implies that it isn't yet.

Commented [BR21]: Awkward wording.

Thesis: From my experience using social media I have identified that depending on our communication needs there are many options to choose from the internet. It seems like you're trying to say the internet gives people many options to communicate. This is fact. Your thesis statement must make a debatable claim, which is an argument/expression of opinion. Facts are not debatable.

Here are some notes on crafting and supporting thesis statements. These notes will also help you revise your outline in Entry 4 and assist you with the classification and division assignments.

Your thesis must make debatable claim, which is an argument/expression of opinion. Your thesis statement cannot be a statement of fact. Facts are not debatable. Keep in mind that you should be writing this paper to persuade the reader to agree with the argument you made (opinion expressed) in the thesis. This is not an assignment where you want to give both sides to an issue. You only give one side.

Commented [BR22]: This doesn't make sense.

Consider these examples of thesis statements as you revise your own:

(1) "Fish are better pets than cats and small dogs for those who live in apartments." This assertion would be backed up by facts, like, "Fish don't make noise that can upset neighbors." Someone else could reasonably argue that cats make better pets, and support that with facts like, “Cats can be cuddled, unlike fish.”

(2) Labradoodles, Jugs, and Puggles are similar in that they are designer dogs; however, when it comes to choosing a loyal family pet, my experience is that the overall health, adaptability, and temperament of a Puggle makes this curly-tailed canine the dog of choice.

If I were writing a paper using the thesis “Cats make better pets than small dogs and fish for apartment living,” I would choose only positive information/characteristics to include about cats and only negative information about dogs and fish. “Fish cannot be cuddled.” “Dogs usually require outdoor walks.” “Litter boxes are simple to clean.” I would not include information like “Cats were worshiped by ancient Egyptians,” because it has nothing to do with cats being better pets.

If I were writing about fish being the best pets, I would use the characteristics of fish to show why they are better pets for those who live in apartments. Fish have scales, but that as a characteristic doesn’t show why they are better pets. But, we can rephrase it to, “Fish do not shed, meaning these animals do not aggravate the allergies of residents and guests. This also means less time vacuuming.”

Reflect: Throughout the years, communication technology has improved so much that nowadays we have options for every need. If we want to gossip and share some kind of events we will use Facebook or Instagram. To increase our professional network, find employment or to know what is trending in the business environment we will use LinkedIn and Twitter, and to have some fun, be creative and crafty or entertain ourselves and others we will use Pinterest and Snapchat.

Commented [BR23]: This section required you to explain the position you took in your thesis. You did not take a position in your thesis, as your thesis is a statement of fact. “Position,” in the context of this assignment, means “stance,” as in “The candidates explained their stances on tax hikes during the debates.” These hypothetical candidates did not explain what tax hikes are. They explained whether they were for or against tax hikes - their opinions on tax hikes.

Reflect: By using this type of organization method my detail ideas will be supported due to the order in which they were laid out. This outline makes my thesis statement be in a neat order. I believe the order of this essay will impress the reader one way to remember which option to choose in communications. Many types of communications are good depending on which way they will be used. My target is to educate the reader and help them to pick on different choices. With this piece of information I wrote in this paragraph, I will catch readers' attention.

June 15, 2017, ENTRY 5: Revising

Purpose and Audience: I believe the author is delivering a message in his writing that will appeal to the new generation about the importance of physical communication via mail. The author's primary purpose is to bridge the gap between modern society demands and the sentimental values that older generations cherish. The author includes clear examples of handwritten letters that deliver not only a message but also to release emotions on the receiver.

Personally, I write to family and friends, without using electronic devices, just to make them understand how much I value spending time in writing a letter. I agree with the author because it's the little things in life like writing letter that has an everlasting effect on the people you love. Did the author make any generalizations or assumptions about people? Remember, generalizations and assumptions weaken arguments and can be insulting.

Thesis Statement, Topic Sentences, and Paragraphs: The thesis statement develops a serious and formal tone. The topic sentence definitely is focused, because it makes clear what happened in the paragraph about. The author expresses in his paragraph a view about the topic by Commented [BR24]: This information does not prove anything. This also looks very similar to the outline on <http://www.justanswer.com/long-paper/8x690-jan-23-2015-entry-1-me-writer-1paragraph-sentences-attitude.html>.

Commented [BR25]: What are detail ideas?

Commented [BR26]: This doesn't make sense.

Commented [BR27]: You didn't even include your thesis statement in the outline.

Commented [BR28]: This sounds very similar to the outline on <http://www.justanswer.com/long-paper/8x690-jan-23-2015-entry-1-me-writer-1paragraph-sentences-attitude.html>. You did not state which order you used and why you chose it over the others.

Commented [BR29]: This word needs to be possessive.

Commented [BR30]: This word should not be capitalized.

Commented [BR31]: This word should not be here.

Commented [BR32]: Word choice error.

Commented [BR33]: This is off topic.

Commented [BR34]: You must identify the thesis statement by quoting it here.

Commented [BR35]: Each paragraph should have a topic sentence. Which one are you talking about?

Commented [BR36]: This doesn't make sense.

Commented [BR37]: Which paragraph? There are three.

examples, definitions and facts, all related to human feelings. The essay tone and presentation provides statistics about the qualities of a physical way of messaging interaction. I believe that depend on the reader feeling and experiences, ideas in the author of "Email vs Letters" paragraph will catch the audience attention. You must identify the thesis statement by quoting it here. We don't know which sentence you are referring to otherwise. If you cannot find the thesis statement, you must suggest one. Secondly, you did not answer if each paragraph had an effective topic sentence. A topic sentence must be the first sentence in a paragraph and must indicate what the paragraph will discuss. Did the paragraphs here do this?

Evidence: The Author is using a variety of examples to give the paragraph specific orientation. The paragraph provides descriptive evidence with examples. The writer brings real facts by comparison and contrast. The author develops his ideas from getting reader attention, constructing a body and conclusions at the end of the writing. Evidence was considerable, real and placed a message to situations on a daily basis. I am not sure what you are saying here. What kinds of evidence did the author use? Are there other kinds of evidence that should have been included?

Organization: The author ideas were organized in a structure of parts and functions. The writer stated enough examples in the three paragraphs for the readers. The organization has a title, introduction, body, and conclusion. The writing enhances its ideas for readers by presenting what the title will be. The parts and functions in the writing hold and give details on the body. The writer places emphasis on the last paragraph and also draws a message. Do you think the author used an organization method to plan this essay? Was there really an introduction? Was there really a conclusion?

Commented [BR38]: This word needs to be possessive.

Commented [BR39]: There were no statistics.

Commented [BR40]: This sentence doesn't make sense.

Commented [BR41]: What? Do not use vague pronouns.

Commented [BR42]: This word needs to be possessive.

Commented [BR44]: This word should not be capitalized.

Commented [BR45]: What paragraph? There are three.

Commented [BR46]: What do you mean by this?

Commented [BR47]: All facts are real.

Commented [BR48]: These sentences do not make sense.

Commented [BR49]: This word needs to be possessive.

Commented [BR50]: What do you mean by this?

Commented [BR51]: This is off topic.

Commented [BR52]: A message is something like a backrub.

Commented [BR53]: This doesn't make sense.

June 17, 2017, ENTRY 6: Evaluation

The Writing Process has been such of a good field for me because invite me to discover how to write. Every time I was in need of writing something, my thoughts weren't organized enough in order to take the first step. By learning the writing process guide, my essays are going to have more sense. I feel more confident in writing an essay's homework using this process because it will have ideas to understand. The writing process teaches me how to start with no

Commented [BR54]: Indent the beginnings of paragraphs.

Commented [BR55]: These words should not be capitalized.

Commented [BR56]: This doesn't make sense. An essay doesn't own homework.

worries from the beginning. The first element that I can have categorized is The Prewriting, here I can prepare everything to begin my writing. You did not summarize the steps of the writing process.

Commented [BR57]: Spacing error.

Commented [BR58]: These words should not be capitalized.

Commented [BR59]: Comma splice.

The other steps I have learned with the first element of writing is to put paper in paragraphs structure. I can start my drafting and separate them in different techniques. Drafting teach me to start paragraphs and giving them the main idea. I understand how to create bridges between sentences with transition words. My writing was all over without any join in sentences, now my message or ideas come together. The textbook shows me where to reach evidence to support my writing. This second element tells me too, that at the end of my introduction to state in one-sentence the basis of the whole paper.

Commented [BR60]: This doesn't make sense.

Commented [BR61]: What? This doesn't make sense.

Commented [BR62]: This should be "teaches."

Commented [BR63]: Who or what is giving the main idea?

Commented [BR64]: Comma splice.

Commented [BR65]: Awkward wording.

Commented [BR66]: Do not use this word in academic writing.

Commented [BR67]: What desired result? What do you mean by this?

Commented [BR68]: Awkward wording.

Commented [BR69]: Who or what is tempted?

Commented [BR70]: What are element skills?

Commented [BR71]: This word should not be capitalized.

Commented [BR72]: This word should not be capitalized.

Commented [BR73]: This sentence is awkwardly worded.

A final element that will teach me a lot of stuff throughout this study is how to achieve the desired result. The way I check my grammar and spelling properly will give to my writing and readers respect. I learn not to skip this very important step because points and credibility will decrease. This third element is crucial because is tempted to skip the editing and proofreading stages. I am sure I will keep learning more the writing and elements skills. Probably after improving my writing knowledge, I will bring with this study unit of College writing my Intellectual knowledge to another level.
