This is my favorite quote by John F. Kennedy :every accomplishment starts with a decision to try.

Things become possible when an attempt is made. Any success does not mean that the road to it is smooth. It all depends on an attempt and being positive regardless of the predicted end. I never thought about going to college and getting a degree. Going to college never interested me. But then I realized that I wanted to be successful and start a career in which I loved instead of working odd jobs just to make money. I decided to go to college in 2014. Life on campus never entertained me, in 2015 I went through difficult situations in my life. I just didn't feel motivated. The reason why was I was reflecting on the past. Back in 2014 I was sexually assaulted and I was having flashbacks. I didn't feel happy, all I wanted to do was stay home and do nothing, I think the reason why I was reflecting on the past was because I had no friends and didn't know who I could talk to to express myself. My grades weren't good at all. Most people including myself thought I was not in my right state of mind.

However, this was not permanent for I was able to walk over it. I realized my purpose of going to school so I decided to remain focused in school. In spring 2016, I put in the effort and made sure that I did what I needed to do to pass all of my classes, I managed to get As and Bs.

And now I'm graduating this semester. I plan on going straight to a four-year school to get my bachelors and then graduate school to get my masters. I am going to college for a purpose, an agenda to develop a career and to assist the society, specifically the young children who have trouble speaking. The main goal, in this case, is to be able to motivate the young children to help develop their ability to speak at early stages.

It may seem difficult but I believe that the motivation I obtained in school will make me determined. I know that there will be challenges but I have already made a decision to pursue my dreams in becoming a speech pathologist.
