indent

Diversity has been an issue for the educational organizations for the past ten years. A stricter policy on the diversity would help the education system to impart quality education. Festivals have been another significant issue that leads to ^{disrupture}rupture in the flow of education which can be addressed by stricter policies and regulations. ^{No + on your reference page}(Hegler, 2013). This issue mainly occurs in the Indian subcontinent. The policies are implemented to address the issues which cause hindrance in education. The ^{Name them}policies include anti-discrimination rules and regulation which would prevent any discrimination in the education organization whether imparting higher education, adult education or PK-12 to the students. Availability of the educated and experienced workforce has been one of the major issues for the education organizations. An inexperienced workforce would not impart quality education to the students thus affecting the society and the economy (Lemoine, Woodard, & Richardson, 2014). ^{What are they?}The existing policies mainly stress ^{ing}on maintain equality among the students and small income group ^{of}people to acquire education. According to Lemoine, Woodard, ~~and~~

Richardson (2014), in order to receive better and good quality education it is important for the students to take admissions in the better education organization. Policies regarding these issues include subsidy ^{ies}for the educational organizations that would help to lower the cost and ~~thus~~ ~~decreasing the cost of education~~. Certain decrease ^sin the tax for the education organization would indent As stated by Lemoine, Woodard, and Richardson (2014), diversity issues have followed increasing trend in the society, and therefore, leading to a decrease in the quality of education and distrust among the students. Presently, as the government is withdrawing subsidies from the educational sector, the institutes are liable to increase the fees of education. This issue is addressed by the Lemoine, Woodard, and Richardson, (2014), in the article. The author states that as the universities are left with no choice other than raising the fees. They should go for another way out. b Because the increased fees are, in turn, de-motivating the students. They are losing focus from the studies looking for higher paid internships in order to pay the tuition fees. The author suggested the universities should start a slightly discriminating pricing strategy that will charge less to the high scoring students and more lower high to the less scoring ones. However, the difference will not be much. Now in order to enjoy the low er price, the students will definitely study well and focus on their studies the study.

indent Another issue that has been addressed by Hughes (2013) is that the students are not getting the appropriate understanding of the lessons. Sometimes the lessons are beyond their level of understanding. To solve this, the author suggested reviewing the student's ability to read and write and also their intake capacity. This will help the institute to set the standard of the lessons more effectively. A collaborative relation between the PK-12, higher education, and adult education organizations would help to solve the issues as most of the issues of the educational systems are interrelated their and there solving these issues at once would have a greater favorable impact on the society.

indent • Demonstration of Two Different Theoretical Viewpoints from Scholarly Literature indent According to Limburg & Clark (2008), adults need less education and more guidance. The main aim of the government is to overcome the challenges that are leading to hindrance in the education system. The policies and rules and regulations of the governments help to overcome the issues for a short term basis, but these policies and regulation do not help completely remove the issues and challenges. Imparting education to the student is necessary, and it is equally important that the education organizations employ^{on} educated and skilled workforce necessary to meet the basic objectives. The policies presently aim to reduce the cost for the education organization, but fail to provide help to the workforce.

and As stated by Bogard, Traylor, & Takanishi (2008), education helps to not only educate the individual but also educate the entire society. Discrimination is a crime from the viewpoint of the government and thus, the anti-discrimination policy helps to remove discrimination from the educational institutions. Discrimination has an adverse effect on the student's personality leading to an adverse effect on the society. Discrimination also leads to hampering the image of the education^{al} organization. The policies stress more on a short-term basis rather than long term basis.

Solving the educational issues for a short period of time cannot solve the purpose of the educational organization. According to Bogard, Traylor, & Takanishi (2008), a permanent solution to the issues of the educational organization would help the not only produce great leader^s but also impart quality education. A collaborative relation between the PK-12, higher education, and adult education organizations would help to solve the issues as most of the issues of the educational systems are interrelated (Murphy, 2008).
