

I would like to share with you a culture thing that we do in Saudi Arabia, specifically my family. By the way, my family is one of the biggest families in the Arabic countries. However, when we welcome ~~the~~ people that we invited to a wedding or even to a banquet, we start welcoming them by loud? high voice, when I say high I mean it, like even the neighbors will know that we have guests. Some people may find it strange and impolite, but it's the opposite, because the more higher you welcomed ~~the~~ the most appreciation for the guests you have.

why strange?

So we see this thing as a normal thing that we do in our life, but some people judge from the first sight, and that's wrong. You have to give it more then one look, you have to know more about it, and when you judge, you have to be patient.

not exactly the point the Miner is trying to make

"How would your life be different if... You stopped making negative judgmental assumptions about people you encounter? Let today be the day... You look for the good in everyone you meet and respect their journey." - Steve Maraboli

Wahid,

There is no organization <sup>in</sup> and little thought to the paper you submitted. It reads what are the main ideas you are writing about? what <sup>error</sup> are you responding to and by whom is it written? what relevant details ~~can~~ you use <sup>to</sup> to support your ideas?

There needs to be paragraph paragraphs, main ideas, supporting details, organization, and actual reflection to the questions we discussed about ethnocentrism and culture.

Also, writing is different from speaking. So, the writing voice should not sound exactly like you speaking voice.
