

A Doll House

Title

→ After giving "A Doll House" a read, I must say that I was not expecting it to be so enjoyable and dramatic. I was extremely ~~happy~~ ^{engaged in the story} and I wouldn't consider it ~~as~~ a waste of time. It has all the goods that a reader enjoys and all the things that are needed to spice up a story. On ~~repeat~~, the whole, the story was very entertaining. Moving on with the characters as I read Torvald, Helmer's character, I was constantly being irritated by the attitude he ~~was giving to his wife~~ ^{had toward} ~~egotistical~~ Nora. He seems very egoistic and conscious about his reputation because even when he knows Nora is not happy with him, ~~and they cannot work things out~~ he's still pretending to be happy in front of other people so they won't judge. ~~I would also not side Nora as~~ ^{However,} ~~according to me, her character was very~~ self-centered and irresponsible. Instead of taking ~~she often behaved immately~~ responsible steps, ~~we were able to see her taking juvenile steps~~ and then she always complained about being treated like a child.

You still need a quote and more
examples

→ As already mentioned above, ~~that~~ Torvald's attitude towards his wife was irrational and very bossy. ~~It sometimes seemed to get on the reader's nerves as he got mad over Nora just for~~ ^{get gotten} ~~He easily irritates the reader when he~~ ^{becomes angry toward Nora} eating macrons ^{check spelling} which wasn't very ^{or (another example)} mature of him. But his bossy attitude seems to fit perfectly in this relationship as Nora always acts like a naïve child. Basically, they both aren't happy with each other ~~the entire time~~ ^{for the often} but still aren't willing to leave each other. ^{story,} According to what I've read, I've come to the conclusion that Nora uses her husband for money and on the other hand, Torvald is willing to stay with Nora because she's young and ^{Due to} beautiful. ~~As according~~ to his nature, he needs something he can show off to people. Nora seems to be disappointed with her relationship and states that "~~it~~ would take the greatest miracle of all" (1496), which means that their relationship is too broken to be fixed by ^{fixing it}

What essay
question
Does this respond
to?