"A True Education Includes Diversity" is an article which was written by McCord Pagan. Pagan is white and he has an African American decent. In this article he is telling his story while he was in the funeral of his African American Paternal grandmother and he was one of the fewest white people there. When pagan saw how different his extended family ^{members} were and how little he knew about them, he got upset. ^{After words,} After that Pagan started talking about how his university had no diversity at all.

This needs to be more so that the reader can tell it's an article

? not sure what this means.

why? Keep the ideas connected. Too many ideas in this TP.

First of all, diversity is a necessity in the education field because students need to be able to know ^{about} other students from different cultures. ^{because it helps them} Diversity makes students learn about how different the other cultures are and how can they deal with each other's and that let them avoid getting shocked if they meet people from another group or race.

working sentence problem

In addition, I came to the United State two years ago and as an international student, I think that diversity is necessary in the universities because I need to meet other students from different places and ^{from other} cultures to learn from them. Also, people usually misjudge my country, Saudi Arabia, and its culture and I would love to dilever a better image about my culture.

how so?

sentence doesn't say much

Moreover, the article ~~is~~ addresses the students and the universities. The writer is asking if the problem is because his university's location or it is because people are not used to the diversity. The writer answers his questions by saying that his university's location might be the reason. In the end, the writer says that diversity is what problem?

for lack of diversity
